

Christmas comes early for Alice's Golf Course community

The University of Fort Hare's Seventh Day Adventist Student Movement Society (SDASM) has donated food and clothing to the Golf Course community's less privileged. The handover ceremony took place on the 13th of November 2011 at the Golf Course Community Hall. The SDASM through its Garments of Hope project help to encourage and inspire other members of the Fort Hare student body to commit to philanthropic causes by participating in activities that touch the lives of the less advantaged.

The SDASM project collects clothes from students around campus and distributes them to the less privileged people in the communities around. The project works with the local Nkonkobe Community Development Agency in identifying communities which need attention. The Golf Course event followed a successful pioneer project in June 2011, where they donated food and clothing to residents from the Hillcrest in Alice.

Siphe Mhlana, a member of the SDASM was happy to see the project managing to touch the lives of the disadvantaged around Alice. On behalf of other SDASM members, Siphe went on to thank the student body for heeding to their call by donating in cash and kind. He also expressed his gratitude to Mrs. Nkomana for her support in linking them with the Golf Course community. In reply one community member said that they were overwhelmed by the event and hoped that this will not end there but to continue in other communities.

To God be the glory!
